

UNE 179001 – Management of centres offering dental services

Who can be certified?

UNE 179001 establishes the general principles and requirements to be met by medical centres offering dental services. These apply to the organization of the medical centre, the facilities and equipment, and the processes for providing dental services.

This standard is compatible and integrated, among others, with the ISO 9001 quality management standard, approximating and specifying the quality requirements in the provision of dental services.

Benefits of 179001

- Increased value in health protection activities in all the dental services of the centre
- Enables patients to choose the most effective professional dental services
- Reinforces the professional competencies of dentists
- It improves the management of the clinic and provides quality services with greater added value
- The certification recognizes the availability of equipment, infrastructure and healthcare personnel necessary to guarantee the quality of the service to be provided by each centre
